

Fictional Writing: Setting

The setting is very important to writing fiction. The setting describes where the action takes place. It invites the reader to imagine places they haven't been before. A good writer describes the setting in detail. Think about the story you want to write, and answer the questions below to help you create your setting. Your story may have more than one place, or environment.

Where does your story take place? For example: In a forest, on a farm, in a castle, etc.

Write some key words that describe your setting: For example: Dark, rainy, jungle, grassy, etc.

Keywords:

Draw a picture of your story's setting. Add details, and words to help you later with your writing.